noticeable improvement," Layman said. "If this program can serve to galvanize these and other ingredients into a cohesive effort producing positive results, then we will have met with considerable success."

He urged any Virginian interested in securing materials or further information to contact the ABC Department's Division of Information in Richmond for assistance.

"We and others have made attempts to get a handle on the problem but we have not always met with success," he said. "But I would suggest to you today that failure is not defeat unless we stop trying, and we're not going to stop trying."

That Tired Feeling (2)

Last week's column discussed exercise as an important weapon against fatigue. Equally important is the quality of food we eat.

Exercise increases the oxygen available in the body tissues to burn the fuel provided in food, thus producing energy. But just as in an engine or furnace, the kind of fuel provided makes the difference between slow, sluggish combustion or intense, high-energy production.

There is no one food which produces energy, contrary to the common opinion that sugar is the "energy food". Because it is so quickly digested and absorbed into the bloodstream, sugar, when eaten in concentrated form, is likely to produce what has been called the "yo-yo effect". The high level of sugar in the blood triggers the production of insulin, which removes the sugar. The result is a quick drop in energy which produces such symptoms as fatigue, headache and weakness.

The process of producing energy in the human body is far more complex than the analogy we have used of an engine or furnace. The process takes place in each cell of the body, and these cells require a varied assortment of vitamins and minerals as well as carbohydrates, protein and fat in order to function properly.

Unless you are a biochemist, a simple check-list like the following will best assure you of a diet which provides all the essentials for health and vitality:

1. Include the four food groups in your diet every day. These are fruits and vegetables; whole grain cereals; dairy products; meat, or, preferably, meat substitutes such as eggs, nuts, legumes.
2. Select a wide variety of foods from day to day.
3. Prepare food as simply as possible to preserve nutrients. Include some raw fruits and vegetables each day.
4. Avoid highly processed foods low in vitamins and minerals and high in additives which may be harmful.
5. Eliminate junk foods such as potato chips, candy, ice cream, pastries, soft drinks. These contain "empty calories" which tend to produce excess weight while leaving the body starved for energy-producing nutrients.
6. Maintain a regular meal schedule (at least 5 hours apart) with the largest meals early in the day. Eliminate all between-meal snacks.

If you have started a daily exercise program and your diet compares well with the suggestions listed above, you have taken two long strides toward buoyant, healthful living. Next week we will discuss the third and by no means least cause of fatigue—the psychological factor.

The Pastor Speaks

You and I are constantly hearing so much today about the energy crisis that is a part of our life. True this may be a reality in so many aspects of our life, but let us turn our attention to the question of energy in God's Kingdom.

We in our churches find there is truly no shortage of power, Holy Spirit Power that is, when we behold the blessings of God in our midst these days. God has blessed us with an excellent spirit among the people and has given them a real challenge to move forward for Him.

Faith and Prayer are the keys to solving this crisis in our personal lives and each of us is given the weekly opportunity to avail ourselves of togetherness as we pray one for another and put our faith to work.

I am excited about how God is ready to reach out in our midst and lead when we join together in fellowship in the churches, as we worship and pray then move out into the week as a place of service.

We are happy to say "Open Every Sunday For Full Blessings" is the answer for solving the greatest energy crisis of your life.

Where are you on Sunday Morning and Night? The real place for joy, fellowship, excitement, inspiration, and worship is in the church.

Church is the Sunday Morning and Night Place for you to join with others in a time together that you will not forget. It is the place that many good things are happening each week.

Learn how to train your children and you in the way they and you should go, be prepared to share in the joys and problems of each day and find the real search for happiness to satisfy your soul's thirst.

Your pastor wants to count on you to be present each week at your church and if you have any problems or suggestions, let your pastor hear from you in person and not through someone else. Your pastor is just as near to you as your telephone, so give him a call. Pray for your pastor, he is praying for you and you may have to call on a pastor some day when you are not expecting to need your pastor.

Prayerfully,
Your Pastor for the month,
Rev. Daniel W. Menser

The Bible And Daily Living

By Dr. William L. Trimyer

Lesson for September 16, 1979
Scripture References: Isaiah 5:1-7; Matthew 13:44-46). 21:33-46
Focal Passage: Matthew 13: 44-46; 21:33-46

The Kingdom of God is like a treasure hid in a field, which, when discovered by someone, they hide, and joyously sell all they have to buy the field (Matt. 13:44-46;

Parables In The Old Testament

... The Bible is big on parables. Both the Old and New Testaments abound with parables. Jesus was a great believer in using stories as a means of conveying spiritual truths. He drew from everyday common experiences to reveal the nature of his Heavenly Father's Kingdom. For further clarification, we will say that "a parable is an earthly story with a heavenly meaning."

The Old Testament contains many uses of parables. Isaiah put his story of the vineyard to song as an added means of communicating his message. Of course, a parable has little meaning other than an entertaining story for those who do not have "eyes" to see. Unless interpreted, many would miss the intent of the parable-story. Isaiah was careful to interpret his parable about the vineyard.

Parables In The New Testament

Most people think of Jesus and the New Testament when they hear the word parable. Jesus was a master craftsman in the art of storytelling. He chose stories of human interest to describe the nature of God and his kingdom.

We will note in our study of Jesus' use of parables that he sometimes told them in response to criticism from the Pharisees, or when he was trying to teach his disciples. Rather than give a direct answer to his critics, Jesus would tell them a story. His critics always wanted to know here he got his authority to perform miracle ministries, so Jesus responded with parables.

Look at Matthew 21:33-46. Here are two parables which directly deal with the authority of Jesus and with the nature of the Kingdom of God. The first parable is about a vineyard owner and his tenants. The story is one of violence and tragedy, but the point of the story is to show how the Lord's prophets were rejected by the people of Israel. The end result of God's attempts to reach the hearts of the people of Israel came when he made the extreme sacrifice of sending his Son, Jesus, whom they also rejected.

The above story is provocative, which is what Jesus intended to do with the use of his parable-story.

More Kingdom Parables

Jesus was a "wiz"at telling long and short stories, and not all of his parables are full-length feature stories. Read Matthew 13:44-46 for examples of shorter parables. Matthew's Gospel contains a number of parables which describe the nature of the Kingdom of God.

Jesus was instant upon teaching his followers about the Kingdom of Heaven. Talk about the "Kingdom of God" may be confusing to many, for such a phrase conjures up the image of a king who reigns over his people, and who occupies a stately throne. This is particularly true of the Old Testament image of God.

The New Testament, however, pictures the Kingdom of God in terms of rule rather than reign. God is forever in control of the final "curtain call," as well as present times. God loves his people and desires them to enter the kingdom at whatever cost. Hence, the parable in Matt. 13:44-46. The "Kingdom of God" is a treasure above all treasures.

The hearers of Jesus' parables did not always understand what he was talking about when he spoke in parables. His critics believed that he spoke in riddles. But to understand the parables, one must possess a particular attitude. An attitude towards God that is rebellious or indifferent cannot possibly understand the parables. Jesus told the parables as an attempt to break through hostile barriers and capture the interest of his hearers with his stories.

The two short parables in Matt. 13 reveal that the Kingdom of God is experienced by some after a long search while others seem to come upon it quite naturally. However long it takes for a person to discover and experience the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, they will find their discovery something worth celebrating.

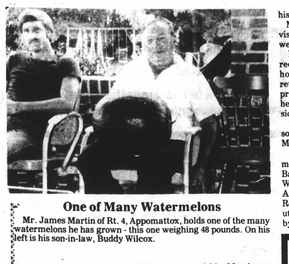
Whirlpool Corporation Names Martin Vice President

Mr. James Martin of Rt. 4, Appomattox, holds one of the many watermelons he has grown - this one weighing 48 pounds. On his left is his son-in-law, Buddy Wilcox.



One of Many Watermelons

Robert V. Southworth

Named Acting Southside Electric Coop Manager

Robert V. Southworth, for eight years the assistant manager at Southside Electric Cooperative, will become acting manager with the retirement of C. S. Hooper, Jr., the general manager for the past 42 years. Mr. Hooper officially retires on Sept. 16th.

This announcement was made at the 42nd annual meeting of the membership at the SEC pavilion at Crewe last Saturday by J. Woodrow Martin, Secretary of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Martin, who is chairman of the Operations Committee of the Board, said that his committee would be seeking a new General Manager and expected to make a recommendation to the full 10-man Board early in 1980.

The Operations Committee, besides Mr. Martin, includes G. Foster Reynolds, of Charlotte County; Calvin Carter, of Campbell County, and W. A. Kantzler, of Amelia County.

At the reorganizational meeting of the Board on Saturday, O. S. Williams, of Brunswick, was re-elected President; Mr. Reynolds, was named Vice-President; and Mr. Martin was named Secretary-Treasurer.

Nearly 1,000 members were among the nearly 4,000 persons present for the annual meeting, and there were over 4,000 proxies from members who were unable to attend. More than 40 electric appliances were given away as door prizes.

Re-elected for new 3-year terms as members of the Board of Directors were Mr. Reynolds, of Charlotte; Mr. Carter, of Campbell; Mr. Turpin, of Bedford; and Mr. Dillon, of Prince Edward County. All four had been nominated by Committess in each of the four districts, and they had no opposition.

Revival Planned At Rocks Church

Revival services at Rocks Baptist Church will begin Sunday morning, September 16th, and will continue each night through September 19th.

Dr. Carl A. Collins, a former pastor of the church, will be conducting the services.

Dr. Collins is now serving as Interim Pastor of the Catawba Baptist Church in the Roanoke area.

Everyone is invited to come and attend these services.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Uncluttering Garages

When the time comes for you to be the gardener, or the home handyman, or simply the strong arm that puts out the lawn furniture, where do you head? Most American homeowners would head for the garage where, in addition to the family car, they would be apt to find anything from power mowers to snowmobiles.

Many home experts point out that this type of garage clutter is neither safe, efficient nor economical. Good news for homeowners who wish to straighten up their garage or basement is an easily assembled storage building that provides economical space for storing sports and garden equipment, patio furniture tools.

Constructed of completely prefabricated and prefinished parts these handsome buildings require no cutting, snipping, hammering, special tools or special mechanical ability to be assembled. Developed by Arrow Group Industries, subsidiary of Chromalloy, these storage buildings come in a variety of designs and color schemes that harmonize with any outdoor setting but more importantly they are solidly constructed to provide extra support against wind and snow loads. Arrow is also the only manufacturer with the unique "never-fail" door system, and all the other features you want. These strong buildings will provide year-round protection for many of the things that now clutter up your basement, yard and garage.
